

GET INVOLVED WITH EMCC GLOBAL RESEARCH DEVELOPMENT

EMCC global research development is agile, relevant and aligned to real time environment challenges that have not been experienced before. This is an opportunity to get involved in cutting edge research on topics that are trending and that coaching practitioners can collaborate on to support and apply in practice.

The future for coaching, mentoring and supervision depends on the co-creation and uptake of research through communities of practice. Our inclusive research development programme provides a variety of ways for practitioners and researchers to co-create research informed practice based on high quality research.

Whatever your background as a researcher, practitioner, or both, joining our global network for research informed practice will be valuable to your professional development.

Our research development programme provides opportunities, such as:

- Managing thematic projects for our EMCC Global Centres for Excellence
- Contributing to our research conferences
- Attending on-line workshops to develop your research capabilities
- Publishing through EMCC global
- Getting advice on the ethics and quality of your research plans
- Discovering the research needs of practitioners
- Understanding how research can enhance your practice
- Locating partners with shared interests to work with you

Current thematic areas include diversity and inclusion, climate action, research landscapes, and post-pandemic work challenges
